

Professor Kipper Kidd Talks Phone-y Baloney with a Twist!

Directions: One person reads the words in brackets and another person gives answers. The first person writes these words in the empty spaces. When all the spaces are full, read the new story for a fun twist to Phone-y Baloney! (Your new story is funnier if you read the original story first!)

In Phone-y Baloney, Professor Kipper Kidd sees how Amy and Jennifer use phones to push kids away rather than help them [an activity that takes two people to do] _____. Amy is not as popular as Jennifer on BUDDIES and is jealous of other kids' fun pictures of [a silly thing one can do] _____ and [scary thing to do] _____. Jennifer adores herself and teases others online calling them [an odd animal] _____ and [a tiny insect] _____. Kipper says WE SHOULD ALL BE MORE LIKE [a small rodent] _____ because they protect each other with their [body parts] _____. When the circus comes to town Jennifer boasts about going with her cool friends making other pals feel dumpy. Amy scolds her sister by saying she is a big [color] _____ [name of fuzzy object] _____. Professor Kidd encourages kids to unplug from their [object in the kitchen] _____ where elephants eat breakfast. Later Grandpa agrees to take the children to the circus and the kids show kindness for each other with words like, "You are a cute little [African animal] _____." and "You remind me of a big soft [ocean creature] _____. In the end the children use BUDDIES to plan their circus adventure where they eat footlong hotdogs and [a garden plant] _____.
