

Professor Kipper Kidd and the Jungle Jumper Jostle with a Twist!

Directions: One person reads the words in brackets and another person gives answers. The first person writes the answers in the empty spaces. When all the spaces are full, read the new story for a fun twist to Jungle Jumper Jostle! (Your new story is funnier if you read the original story first!)

Jonas didn't know what hit him when at playtime he picked up Abigail's [large building] _____. Abigail assumed Jonas was a [a big hairy animal] _____ with a heart made of [sticky candy] _____. Kipper said we should share our thoughts and ask others theirs. So Abigail said if Jonas broke the Jungle Jumper, she would feel [happy feeling] _____. Randa provided the advice that we should stop and count five [name of birds] _____ to calm our anger. Wudsol thought the solution was to punch Jonas in the [body part] _____, because that's what he did to when his brother hid hockey cards. Burblex pointed out that hippos, lions and [cute cuddly animal] _____ sometimes fight to the death. Abigail first asked her [a distant relative] _____ to help, but then told Jonas she wishes he would play with the [earth moving equipment] _____ toy instead. The story was taking a good turn when Wudsol reminded everyone that the kids also exchanged harsh [gardening tools] _____. Kipper asks Wudsol what soft words would help, and Wudsol said "apologies and forgiving". Abigail and Jonas do just that and the story ends with hippos taking a bath, lions dancing, and kangaroos [something you do at Christmas] _____.
